

Acknowledgements

The ideas in this book developed over several years. I therefore have many people to thank for their stimulating conversation, enthusiasm and feedback. I am grateful to my colleagues at Curtin University who attended my first research presentation on this topic and who generously shared their knowledge with me on that occasion. I also extend my thanks to my colleagues at the University of Melbourne for their support in the years it took to write this book. I am grateful to the members of my writing group in Screen and Cultural Studies who provided me with encouragement and motivation in the final few months of writing.

I extend my warm thanks to Melanie Ashe for her extensive research assistance on this project. I am also very grateful to Belinda Glynn, not only for copyediting this manuscript, but for her advice and guidance. The team at Edinburgh University Press have also been most helpful in their professionalism, and I appreciate the useful and encouraging feedback from the anonymous reviewer who read the first draft of this book. I also extend my appreciation to the School of Culture and Communication at the University of Melbourne for providing financial support in preparing this manuscript for publication.

I am also indebted to several people who have encouraged this project through their friendship, support and solidarity. My warmest gratitude goes to Kirsten Stevens, Sian Mitchell, Whitney Monaghan and Joseph Walton. Lastly, I sincerely thank my family: Thomas, Lyn, Catherine, Daniel and Helen Loreck.
